Livingstone, and the Grateful, Hospitable People of the City of Pittsburgh, Pa., the Mothers and Relatives of our Comrades who "Carry on" as Pennsylvania Auxiliary No. 1, 80th Division Veterans Association, and to the Members of the 80th Division and all Friends of the Veterans, Who by Their Unselfish, Untiring and Loyal Support, Aid and Co-operation, have made the Second Reunion of the 80th (Blue Ridge) Division the Great Success Achieved, and in Behalf of the Finest Body of Men Who Ever Served upon the Field of Battle, Fighting a Great Fight in a Righteous Cause, Representing Great States and a Greater People—

I, Lloyd M. Brett, President of the Eightieth Division Veterans Association, do Hereby, Publicly, Express the Sincere Gratitude of Our Organization.

LLOYD M. BRETT.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE EIGHTIETH DIVISION

In compliance with War Department Orders, the 80th Division was organized August 27, 1917, at Camp Lee, Va. The majority of the officers and enlisted men being from Western Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia.

The Division is named the "Blue Ridge Division" and has for its shoulder insignia a shield outlined in white on a khaki background with three blue mountains superimposed.

The Division began leaving Camp Lee on May 17th, 1918, and was embarked at Newport News for France. Its principal points of entry were at St. Nazaire, Bordeaux, and Brest. The assembly point of the Division was Calais, from which place it departed early in June for the Samer training area, with the British. The Artillery was not trained in this area but rejoined the Division September 13th. The last units of the Division arrived in France June 19, 1918.

The Division left Samer training area on July 4th, for Third British Army Sector, where it arrived July 5th. All units trained with the British in the Artois sector; while in this sector the troops were attached to the British and were on active duty in the trenches.

On August 18th the units of the Division left this area and proceeded to the 14th training area, where it remained until August 31st. On September 1st it moved to the Stainville and later to Tronville area as reserve during the St. Mihiel operation. During this time 320th infantry regiment and 315th machine gun battalion took part in active operations.

Commencing September 14, the Division moved into the Argonne and began its preparation for the offensive in that region. On September 26th, in conjunction with eight other American Divisions, it attacked, at Bethincourt, advancing a distance of nine kilometers in two days. On September 29th it was relieved and assembled in the vicinity of Cuisy. On October 4th it again attacked, and over difficult ground attained a distance of four kilometers in nine days.

On October 12th the Division was again relieved and proceeded by march and bus to the Thiaucourt area where it was re-equipped. On October 23, 24 it again moved, this time to the Le Neufour area where it remained until October 29th, making preparations for the resumption of the Meuse-Argonne offensive.

The Division, on October 29th, entered the line St. Georges-St. Juvin and on November 1st made an attack on that line, penetrating in the next five days to a distance of 24 kilometers, being relieved the morning of November 6th. Upon relief it proceeded by marching to the Buzancy and Champ Mahaut areas.

On the 18th of November the Division proceeded by march to the 15th training area, completing the march December 1st.

The 155th F. A. Brigade after its relief from duty with the 80th Division, remained in the Cunel Sector, serving successively with American division in that sector. It was in action for 48 consecutive fighting days. It proceeded by rail from Dun-sur-Meuse to the 15th Training area, arriving December 4th to 7th.

Maj. Gen. Adelbert Cronkhite, U. S. Army, commanded the Division from September 9, 1917, to include November 11, 1918.

To include May 15, 1919, there had been reported from this Division the following casualties: 1,141 battle deaths, 5,622 wounded and 101 prisoners of war taken by the enemy.

To include March 1, 1919, 42 individuals of this Division had been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross.

The following units composed the Division: 159th and 160th Infantry Brigades; 317th, 318th, 319th, 320th Infantry Regiments; 314th and 315th M. G. Battalions; 155th Artillery Brigade; 313th, 314th, 315th Artillery Regiments; 305th Trench Mortar Bat.; 313th Divisional M. G. SERVICE →

Will forever "carry on" as one of the Sacred Words of the war; like Buddy, Bunky and a host of others that were born, or acquired a new significance from the war, it will have a very special meaning to all who served, here on the "Home Sector" and "Over There." There is no measuring of honest Service, Service that comes from the heart of loyalty, needs no special stage, nor scenic effects! Nor does it go, for long, unappreciated. There will ever be jealous hearts to scoff at the fruits of our labors, mean and selfish souls, who, begrudge "Everybuddy" his well earned place upon the tablet of honor, men who want the word "Service" to be forgotten, as it applies to the World War.

"SERVICE MAGAZINE," published by the 80th Division Veterans Association at Pittsburgh, Pa., has been called "The Best Soldier Publication in America." We are not content with just that! We wish to make it the best beyond question. We desire to "carry on" with special emphasis on the word "Service" and the name "Buddy"—we want to keep liaison with everybuddy who can feel unashamed of their war record. "Service" is a regular monthly comunique of events past, present and future. Its pages contain the best reminiscences of the days in Camp and "Over There." Its stories are priceless in value, first, because they are true pen pictures of a great Service and secondly, because they now carry the mellowness of time. "Everybuddy," mother, dad, brother and sister, cousins and aunts, uncles and granddaddies, whose hearts were fighting in the great battle of keeping the Faith, supplying the Confidence and Moral Courage of their boys "Over There"—watching and waiting, hoping and praying, will enjoy the monthly visit of SERVICE MAGAZINE.

Why not tell them about it?

Why not make it possible for them to have a true record of your service for them and our country?

SERVICE is a thirty-two page monthly magazine — owned and published by the 80th Division Veterans Association, costs $2.00 a year, and is worth it.

Write for a sample copy—and then, when you are convinced—help to increase its usefulness and circulation.

"Everybuddy get a Buddy."
