In May of 1918, the division embarked aboard ships bound for France. Arriving by June 9, the division was moved by train to Calais and attached to the British Army. All four infantry regiments participated with the British in the Somme Offensive during August 1918.

At the end of August, the division moved by train through Paris to the U.S. sector at St. Mihiel. During the St. Mihiel Offensive of September 1918, the 80th Division served as the First Army Reserve.

On September 26, 1918, the allies launched the Meuse-Argonne Offensive. For seventeen days, the 80th Division attacked north along the Meuse River. On October 9th, the division penetrated the Hindenburg Line. The division was headquartered at Bethincourt from October 1-12.

Division Insignia. The 80th "Blue Ridge" Division shoulder patch shows three mountains of the Blue Ridge, one peak for each state that furnished soldiers to the division: Virginia, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania. The division memorial was dedicated in 1927 in Nantillois, France.

The general offensive resumed on November 1, 1918. The 80th Division captured Sivry-les-Buzancy on the 2nd, Vaux-en-Dieulet and Sommauthe on the 4th, and La Thibaudine Farm on the 5th. On 6 November, the 80th Division occupied La Harnoterie Farm.

On November 11, 1918, the armistice was announced, ending the war. The 80th Division had spent 47 days in combat, captured 1813 German prisoners, and suffered 1241 killed and 4788 wounded. 619 80th Division soldiers were decorated. After the 1st and 2nd regular divisions, the 80th Division was recognized as the leading National Army Division for number of days in combat and honors earned.
